RECEIVEDResearch Memorandum
RSB-197, December 14, 1962TO : The Under Secretary
THROUGH: S/S
FROM : INR - Roger HillsmanSUBJECT: Free-World Shipping to Cuba Since the End of the US Quarantine

In accordance with your recent request, we have compiled the following data on Soviet use of free-world shipping to Cuba since November 20, 1962.

Ship Movements

According to available intelligence information, a total of 19 free-world ships have arrived at Cuban ports since the end of the US Quarantine (6:40 a.m., November 20) through midnight, December 13. It is possible that one or two more ships have arrived during the period midnight, December 13, through midnight, December 14, but confirmed information on them has not yet been received.

Fourteen of those reported are dry cargo and five are tankers. Nine were chartered to the USSR, three to Communist China, and two to Cuba.

Grouped by flag, seven are British, four Greek, two Swedish, one West German, one Norwegian, one Spanish, one Italian, one Dutch, and one Lebanese.

Soviet-Bloc Shipping

A total of 32 Soviet-bloc ships have been reported as arriving at Cuban ports during the same period. They have consisted of 19 dry cargo ships, 4 passenger ships, 8 tankers, and 1 trawler-refrigerator ship.

Cargoes

Cargoes in both free-world and Soviet-bloc ships to Cuba during this period have included agricultural machinery, tractors, trucks, grains, chemicals, steel forms and building materials, trucks, cotton, medical supplies, insecticides, construction machinery, and crude oil and refined petroleum products. There has been no evidence of arms or any of the cargoes arriving at Cuba since the quarantine
